Dear Campus Community,

As we approach the beginning of fall semester classes on August 28, the safety and well-being of students, faculty and staff continues to be our top priority. As you have likely heard, the weather forecast for our area includes rainfall and winds related to Hurricane Hilary as the storm is projected to move from the Baja California region to Southern California. In our region, rainfall is expected to be the greatest on Sunday, with a good chance of rain continuing on Monday. The communities close to Citrus College may experience heavy rainfall, strong winds and the possibility of flooding in some areas.

The College is closely monitoring the storm and any guidance that is being provided by local authorities, including the City of Glendora - Tropical Storm Weather Alert | City Updates | City of Glendora and AccuWeather - 2023 Local Hilary Tracker | AccuWeather. For additional information on storm safety, you can also visit the County of Los Angeles website - Ready-Set-Go-Flood-Preparation_2022.pdf \(lacounty.gov\).

While our fall semester classes do not begin until August 28, many faculty and staff will be helping students on campus this coming week as students continue the admissions process and obtain assistance with enrollment, financial aid, counseling services, and other support. Our campus is scheduled to be open on Monday and throughout the week. As the College continues to monitor the storm closely, we will notify the campus community should the storm create the need to modify our operations and plans for next week.

Please be safe as we look forward to another good week on campus, followed by the beginning of our fall semester.

Sincerely,

Greg Schulz, Ed.D.
Superintendent/President
